THE LOST IS FOUND.

The Predigal Express Package, Mysterionaly Missing, Mysteriously Returns.

And There Are Sounds of Music and Dancing in the House of the Adams Express Company.

O'Hara Released from Prison and R instated in His Position as Clerk -Mr. Henderson's Say.

The Lot is found, and there are sounds of music and dancing in the house of the Adams Express Company. At 6 o'clock yesterday morning an employe at the depot office opened the safe and there found the express money package which had been mysteriously missing since Tueslast, and for the supposed of which John O'Hars was under surveillance for two days and finally Prested and placed in the station house, The return of the package to the safe is as mysterious as its disappearance, and no one about the office appears to know anything or is willing to talk about the matter. When opened the money was found intact, not a dollar missing. The strangest part of the Mair is that the package should be found in the identical safe from which it disappeared, ising against a partition, apparently as unconcerned as though it had not been a subject of comment for three days. The employes are mum, but one can readily read in their countenances the full measure of satisfaction which they experience at such a fortuitous event. When questioned about the disappearance and reappearance of the package they invariably answer: "It is not our place to talk about the matter; you must see the managers of the company." They acknowledge that the package could not have been in the safe without discovery, from Tuesday evening till yesterday morning, but even this much is not admitted in words, as all have resorted to signs to indicate a negative or affirmative answer. Lest cate a negative or affirmative answer. Lest the public should suspect that the employes of the Adams have suddenly been stricken dumb, it is well to state that they can talk as glibly as ever upon other subjects.

As soon as Manager John J. Henderson learned that the package had been found, and an examination proved that the $3,800 which it contained had not been disturbed he repaired to the Mayor's office and took the necessary steps towards releasing the victim of the company's suspicion. After stating the facts as herein given, an order was issued for O'Hara's release and the opening of his prison doors soon followed. O'Hara was much the same as he came out vindicated that he was during the trying ordeal through which he was compelled to pass, calm, collected and smiling. He said that he had no fears of the result from the start, as he 'did not see how they could punish an innocent man.' He further remarked that ''It was pretty tough to he averested on surgicious hat I suppose. turther remarked that "it was pretty tough to be arrested on suspicion, but I suppose it's all right." At 4 o'clock he left for Swiss City, where he has relatives living and where he would have spent New Year's day except for the disappearance of the $3,800 facial expression indicated that he was truly heaven.

A rumor was current yesterday afternoon to the effect that the friends of O'Hara were urging him to enter legal proceedings against the company for false imprisonment, and it was said that manager Henderson had offered him $1,000 and a life position in the company's service as a compromise. It was said that O'Hara refused the proposition and demanded $10,000 as the least sum for which he would agree not to commence an action against the company's service again on his return to the city, but upon what terms is unknown. O'Hara is a young man of intelligence and has always borne a good reputation. It is more than probable that he realizes that his vindication is as complete as it could possibly be after a suit at law which, after all, might not result in anything more than a large per cent. of vexation of spirit. A Sentinel representative called at the seicence of Manager Henderson, corner of New Jersey and St. Clair streets, about eight o'cle ck last evening, and was informed that that gentleman had retired and could not be seen. The reporter insisted, however, that he be allowed to see Mr. Henderson long enough to a strength of the section of spirit. A who had admitted the newsnaner. enough to ask him one question, whereupou Mrs. H., who had admitted the newspaper man, said: "What is it? I will go upstairs and ask him for you, if you will tell me what the question is."
"Then tell him," said the reporter, "that I would like to know whether or not there is

O'Hara $1,000 and a life position if he would not bring suit against the company for false mprisonment."

The lady hurried upstairs, and in a few minutes came back again with the information that her husband would be down directly and answer the question himself. Mr. Henderson soon appeared and greated the reporter with a smile, saying, as he seated himself, that he was very sleepy, not having been to bed for two or three nights.

"You can say," said he, "that there is no truth whatever in that report. It no doubt originated among malicious people who are originated among malicious people who are arrying their best to induce O'Hara to bring suit against the company. O'Hars told me this afternoon, shortly before he left for Swiss City, that he had been urged to go into litigation, but had no intention whatever of doing so. I told him that he could do as he pleased, but my advice to him was to return to the city Monday morning, and assume the duties of the position from which he was temporarily removed. I also told him that if he went into the courts with this affair he would be looked upon with suspicion by the public. He shook hands with me, and said that he did not bleme the company for the course it had taken, for, according to the facts presented, everything was against him, and he was therefore not surprised when he was locked therefore not surprised when he was locked among the lovers of speed contests. think that it is a little singular that the money was not discovered prior to this "Will this affair be investigated further?" That's a question that I can not answer eadily, although I will say that I hardly think it will. The money has been recovered, and the indications are that the matter will rest right where it is. The newspapers Spain passed him, keeping the lead until the bave said a great deal more about this close, the crowd becoming so excited as to in many instances they have guilty of gross misrepresentations. I have been reported as saying things that I never thought of saying and, taking it altogether. I hardly think the press has done the right thing by us in this matter. One of the newspapers tried to make it appear that there was a defalcation in the up-town office about Christmas time, and that the Traveling Anditor was in the city eventually at the control of the managers of a new rink in Greenfield, Hancock County, and the Jeffersonian, of that place, has this to say of the new place of amusement: "The new skating rink in the Walsh Block is being well patronized by our people, and promises to ing Auditor was in the city everhauling the books of the company. There was nothing in this whatever. Mr. Murphy, the aforesaid Auditor, came here from Cincinnati at my request to assist the cashier, who was overrun with work."

The reporter then arose to leave, and before bidding him good-night Mr. Henderson announced that he could say that the express company was perfectly satisfied with the course it had pursued in the O'Hara matter, and would not be the least alarmed were the young man to insti-tute proceedings against them. They could stand endless litigation if he could. Express circles about the depot were alive with gossip last night, and the mysterious return of the package had dwarfed the sen-sation attendant upon its disappearance sation attendant upon its disappearance Tuesday. There remains no question but the package was surreptitiously returned to the safe, as it could not possibly have escaped detection in the many thorough searches that were made for the missing money. The safe is not more than four feet square, has a combination lock, and the Adams people were so careful in their search as to employ lights when they invaded its intricacies. Two facts are therefore well established: The package was stolen and was afterwards returned; the party returning the package must have known the combination of the safe. Whether any one is suspected of course is unknown, and as Mr. Henderson questions whether any further investigation will be prosecuted, the public may never know more of this mysterious affair than is here given.

Before leaving the city O'Hara seems to have indulged in a little quiet talk with employes. He said in so many words that De-tective Hazen had formulated a plan to starve him into a confession, but as he was innocent he had nothing to confess.

Great Closing-Out Sale of Men and Youths' Clothing at a Sacrifice. The old reliable Clothing-House of Lewis Dessar, 120 and 122 South Meridian street, makes the announcement (and this from them means all that their words imply) that, owing to lateness and backward season, they offer all their immense stock at a fearful sacrifice. The stock consists of the best grade of Winter Clothing, made up for them by their Eastern manufacturing concern, and the goods will be sold for less than their original cost, thus saving to purchasers not only the big profits charged by the wholesaler and retailer, but at less than they can be jobbed to the wholesale merchant. No such opportunity for buying a high grade of Clothing has ever been offered in Indiana-polis. Mr. Dessar leaves for the East within ten days, and this sale will continue till that time in order to make room for spring goods, and all who need Clothing should call at once and be convinced that these statements are absolutely true.
